HOW SC FARM TO SCHOOL TEACHES KIDS ABOUT FOOD AND AG DURING COVID

BY HANNAH ARNDT

October is National Farm to School Month. While COVID-19 has affected the school year, the South Carolina Farm to School program is still underway. School districts across the state have chosen different ways to pursue instruction, with some offering in-person classes, others teaching kids online, and still others blending the two under a hybrid model. Whatever the learning situation, South Carolina Farm to School offers a variety of services and resources to help teachers and parents keep their students engaged, ranging from fun and unique recipes to classroom curriculum and book guides.

“Even though the word ‘school’ is in the program title, there are plenty of activities that can be done at home,” said Farm to School Coordinator LauraKate McAllister. “Parents can download our Garden Toolkit, Certified SC coloring book, Taste Test Guide, and so much more on the Farm to School website.”

Overall, the goal of the South Carolina Farm to School program is to help influence healthy eating habits by increasing access to locally sourced produce, provide opportunities for economic growth, and strengthen communities and relationships.

But just like many other programs, Farm to School has had to adapt as in-person events, school visits, and training sessions continue to be restricted.

One of the major changes to the program this year centers on participation in the annual Make Your Plate SC Grown program. Rather than just celebrating Certified SC produce during one school week, students will be able to submit photos of their taste test plates through the entire month of October. Participants can use the taste test guide to find local and in-season produce to help kids try new food, without creating a ton of food waste.

The SC Garden Toolkit is one of many resources available for download at scfarmtoschool.com

SC Farm to School is also partnering with South Carolina Farm Bureau’s Ag in the Classroom to provide free annual subscriptions to the Book of the Month program. Every month, Ag in the Classroom makes available a new ag-related book with accompanying activities that meet South Carolina state educational standards. To view more information, subscribe and to view past Books of the Month, please visit scfb.org/book-of-the-month.

“Farm to School looks a little different this year,” said McAllister. “While we have had to adapt the program to meet guidelines and restrictions set in response to COVID, I am happy to see teachers, schools, and parents utilizing online resources, using gardens for hands-on learning experiences, and making use of outdoor space as vehicles for lessons.”

For more information and to access online resources, please visit scfarmtoschool.com.

FROM AGRITOURISM TO PEANUTS

Agritourism is big in the fall, but especially this fall in South Carolina. You can see that by the many corn mazes, pumpkin patches, hayrides, and other special events we have listed on page 3 of this issue. And that’s just a sampling – if you sign up for the SC Agritourism Association newsletter at scfarmfun.com, you can learn about dozens of events and farms to visit each month.

As the pandemic wears on, people are looking for socially distanced ways to have fun with their families, and farms offer an open-air setting, learning, and Instagram-worthy photo opportunities (I’m not on Instagram, but Blanche is.) Many farms have adapted to COVID-19 by asking visitors to make reservations in addition to other safety precautions, so do your research when planning a trip.

There’s one corn maze that has extra-special meaning for me this year, and that’s the one at Boone Hall in Mount Pleasant. The maze portrays Willie McRae, a friend and champion of agriculture in South Carolina who passed away earlier this year. I’ve written about Willie in this space before. I was honored to be able to make some remarks about him at the ribboncutting for the corn maze. Blanche and I enjoyed seeing friends and family from around the state as we honored Willie’s memory.

In other seasonal news, peanut digging has begun. It’s always neat to see fields full of peanuts drying in windrows in the sun. Soon, truckloads of peanuts will begin arriving at peanut buying points around the state. These buying points are a sort of liaison between farmers and peanut shellers. At the buying points, the peanuts are dried and cleaned. Then, peanut inspectors employed by SCDA inspect and grade them. The system ensures both sides get a fair shake.

Combining a little agritourism with peanut season, I “hosted” my granddaughters Clara and Virginia with two friends for a field trip to Bowman earlier this month. I dug them some peanuts and let them pick them off the vine. They got to see cotton opening up, dairy cows getting ready to be milked, and run on top of some round bales of hay lined up. Easy to see why agritourism is so popular.

As you’re enjoying your fall, I hope you’ll think of the farmers hard at work, whether they’re digging peanuts or giving visitors a tour of the farm.

Join our State Farmers Markets in celebrating the fall Harvest Season.

Throughout the month of October, vendors will feature fall flowers, pumpkins, Certified South Carolina seasonal produce, and much more.

Visit us October 1 – November 1 for décor and items to put everyone in the Harvest Season spirit.

Please contact the market for its operating hours. Due to COVID-19, Harvest Season will be celebrated throughout October rather than one high-attendance weekend.

SOLAR POLLINATOR CERTIFICATION PROGRAM NEW TO SOUTH CAROLINA

CLEMSON — A new certification program provides a framework to encourage the planting and maintenance of pollinator habitats at solar farms in South Carolina.

The Department of Fertilizer Regulation and Certification Services (FRCS), South Carolina Department of Natural Resources (SCDNR), Clemson University Extension Service, and Audubon South Carolina teamed up to offer the Certified Solar Habitat program.

Solar power generation has grown significantly in South Carolina. The 2019 Smart Electric Power Alliance Utility Solar Market Report states that 571.3 megawatts of solar energy is online in South Carolina. In 2017, according to the Smart Electric Power Alliance, South Carolina was fourth in the country in new solar capacity per state, following behind California, Texas, and North Carolina.

The increase in solar generation creates competition on the landscape, adding competition with traditional land uses, such as agriculture and silviculture. Solar farms can also adversely affect valuable natural resources if they are not properly planned and constructed.

However, adding pollinator habitat to a properly sited and constructed solar farm can provide benefits to the solar developer and the solar farms’ neighbors.

Spurred by an initiative of Audubon South Carolina with the support of SCDNR, the South Carolina Solar Habitat Act (§50-4-10) was signed into law by Gov. Henry McMaster, taking effect on June 1, 2018. The law provides a voluntary framework to encourage owners of ground-mounted commercial solar energy generation sites to follow voluntary site management practices that:

- provide native perennial vegetation and foraging habitats beneficial to gamebirds, songbirds and pollinators; and
- reduce stormwater runoff and erosion at the solar generation site.

The Certified Solar Habitat program offers training for environmental consultants, utilities, solar developers, and landowners, led by Clemson Extension beginning in November. This training will focus mainly on how to establish pollinator plant species and manage them within a solar farm.

Solar Developers interested in the program must submit an application by January 15th to FRCS for review. Sites will be inspected two years after establishment and deemed certified if they pass the inspection.

FUNDING AVAILABLE TO HELP WITH ORGANIC CERTIFICATION

BY SCDA

COLUMBIA –South Carolina farmers and food processors who want to pursue organic certification may qualify for reimbursement through a grant administered by the South Carolina Department of Agriculture.

“Organic certification can help agribusinesses find new customers and expand to new markets, and we’re happy to be able to help,” said Commissioner of Agriculture Hugh Weathers.

The Organic Certification Cost Share Program will reimburse producers and handlers of agricultural products up to 50 percent of the operation’s total allowable certification costs, up to a maximum of $500 per certification scope: crops, livestock, wild crops, and handling (i.e., processing). The deadline to apply for reimbursement for the current fiscal year is December 18, 2020.

“This program is a big help in offsetting the expenses of becoming a USDA certified organic producer and the yearly inspections required to maintain the organic certification,” said organic beef farmer Leland Gibson of Gibson Organic Farms. “I try to encourage many farmers to get their farms transitioned into organic production, and one common response is that farmers hesitate to get organic certification because of the cost. My response is to mention the Organic Cost Share program.”

SCDA also has three other cost share reimbursement programs available as projects of the USDA Specialty Crop Block Grant Program, including one that offsets the cost of installing an affordable Cool Bot cold storage unit; and two that support businesses through the Good Agricultural Practices (GAP) Audit process.

To apply for reimbursement programs through SCDA, visit agriculture.sc.gov/grants.

JOHN DE LA HOWE SCHOOL FOR AGRICULTURE NAMED THE THIRD SOUTH CAROLINA GOVERNOR’S SCHOOL

BY GOVERNOR’S SCHOOL FOR AGRICULTURE AT JOHN DE LA HOWE

MCCORMICK, SC – On Monday, September 28, 2020, South Carolina Governor, Henry McMaster signed Enabling Legislation S.613 officially designating the John de la Howe School as the third Governor’s School in the state. The school will now be named the Governor’s School for Agriculture at John de la Howe.

SC Governor’s School for Agriculture
AT JOHN DE LA HOWE

“Becoming the South Carolina Governor’s School for Agriculture is the pinnacle of several years of work to re-brand our school. The legacy of Dr. John de la Howe will live on in the lives of our current and future students due to this historical legislation,” said John de la Howe President Timothy Keown.

The South Carolina Governor’s School for Agriculture at John de la Howe (JDLH) is a public residential high school focused on providing a unique and challenging agricultural education program. Located in McCormick, South Carolina, on 1,310 acres of forest and farmland, students grades 10th–12th have the opportunity to receive hands-on training in the fields of agribusiness, forestry, equipment operation, land management, food science, and more. Admission applications for the 2021-2022 school year will be available online on October 1, 2020, at delahowe.sc.gov. To stay up-to-date with JDLH, follow on Facebook, Instagram, and Twitter.
